B-274047 The eight studies on gender equity in intercollegiate athletics that we Studies Show Some identified showed that womens athletic programs have made slight Advances in Gender advances since 1992 toward gender equity as measured by the number of sports available to female students, the number of females participating in Equity but Womens athletics, and the percentage of scholarship expenditures for womens Athletic Programs sports. The studies also show, however, that womens programs remain behind mens programs as measured by the percentage of female head Still Are Not coaches, comparable salaries for coaches, and ratio of student athletes to Comparable With undergraduate enrollment. Mens Programs in All eight studies were national in scope and examined gender equity in the Some Respects-member schools since 1992. Although most of NCAA athletic programs at the studies used surveys, some studies were based on different sample sizes or time periods, making direct comparisons among studies inappropriate. While the studies selectively evaluated the effect of title IX on various aspects of gender equity in intercollegiate athletics, they did not evaluate schools compliance with title IX. See appendix III for additional information on the studies; see also the bibliography. The studies reported some advances toward equity between mens and Studies Reported Some womens intercollegiate athletics: Advances Toward Gender Equity The average number of sports offered to women rose from 7. 1 in 1992 to 7. 5 in 1996, an increase of almost 6 percent. Schools in all three divisions have added...
