For, under the providence of God, our flag today is now the Symbol of the power and glory of one hundred and ten millions of people, from every race and creed under the sun. Wherever it is unfurled, it represents our ideals of freedom and democracy, of government of the people, by the people, and for the people; and, since the late world war, it is now become the hope of all humanity. It was in this year 1775, immediately following the Battle of Lexington and Cambridge, that John Adams, of Massachusetts, practically nominated General George Washington of Virginia, Commander-in-Chief of the...
