VVe have had in later years a craze in building small mills, and it is a question whether we needed so many. However, when they go out of business, as they often do, it leaves the field clear for the practical man. If there is a phase of the small mills business that I havent been mixed up with, I cant think of it: Salary, running for a part of gross earnings, running for half net earnings, renting, and owning the property. The truth is that the miller in the little mill is not the half-paid, workedto-death fellow that we sometimes see pictured in the milling papers. I...
