Excerpt: . . . 3. Major Offending Issues is, the Current Barriers Exist to Practice, Commerce The Task Force identified those aspects of the current process which are most responsible for the barriers between the defense and commercial industrial base and result in separate plants and organizations being created. It is noted that although much burdensome legislation and many restrictive regulations have been revised or rescinded, the Task Force judgment is that the changes are not always being pursued in spirit or in reality. The most important single intrusive element of the current process is the cost-based contracting system. It triggers many problems: Imposition of an array of unique reporting and oversight systems which are incompatible with commercially competitive enterprises. Negotiation of prices based on costs, using detailed cost or pricing data, rather than prices based on value to the government. The requirement to provide and certify cost or pricing data. Unique cost accounting systems. Excessive controversy and litigation over relatively minor costs which are unallowable or illegal with little management attention on whether the major costs of a system are reasonably beneficial. The second major barrier is the systematic imposition of a host of systematically applied product and process specifications, which are different from those used in the commercial market place, and which prohibit the integration of design, manufacturing, and support between the defense and commercial businesses. A third limitation is the blanket imposition of government wide and DoD unique procurement requirements in the contracting process. These include: International sourcing restrictions. We...
